Bulmer Tye

Two special live music concerts in September...

Nestled in the heart of Bulmer Tye, local pub The Fox, is about to become the setting for an enchanting series of live music concerts. "Folk at the Fox" promises to bring the community together for two unforgettable nights of live music in September.

Converting the pub's cozy lounge area into a small concert venue, these intimate gatherings will showcase some incredibly talented independent singer-songwriters. With its comfortable setting, rustic charm and great food, The Fox in Bulmer provides the perfect backdrop for these events. Performances are hosted by local blogger and podcaster Andy, who is known for his passion for discovering and celebrating outstanding talent. Andy's blog and podcasts can be found at www.folkmylife.co.uk

Tickets are £10 and seats are limited to maintain the intimate nature of the concerts, so be sure to secure yours early. Whether you're a music aficionado or simply looking for a special night out, you are sure to have a wonderful evening of music at, Folk at the Fox...

Our Musical Lineup...

Chris Fox - 5th September

Singer-songwriter Chris Fox's attention to detail, his captivating vocals and intricate guitar are spellbinding to watch. Chris bends the rules of folk by introducing blues, country and Americana styles into his unique and original songbook.

Critically acclaimed and respected throughout the folk scene, Chris is unmissable and one of the most honest, open and accessible musicians I have seen in many years.

Rachel Hill - 19th September

Acclaimed folk-inspired, singer-songwriter Rachel Hill delivers an incredible live show using her brilliant guitar style, classically trained vocals and outstanding loop station skills to create layers of live-recorded harmonies.

Her 2023 debut album "words left unsaid" is a beautiful, elegant and enriching soundscape and she is busy recording her second full studio album and touring the UK festival scene.
